PERSONAL PLANS OF THE FUTURE

With precious stones into the private pension of the future

Traditional investment goals rarely yield any interest, funds are often complicated, and stocks are volatile. Those who want to invest safely today, therefore, use real assets. In addition to real estate and gold, gemstones are becoming increasingly popular. The Kunden Bekommen Werte AG offers diamonds with duty-free storage in Switzerland for a far-sighted old-age provision.

Investing money safely and profitably – hasn't been that easy for some time now. Savings books or endowment life insurance have lost their appeal as investments because they no longer even compensate for inflation losses. Stocks and funds have advantages, but for many investors, they are either too complicated or too risky. In addition, there are often costs such as front-end loads and custody account costs that reduce the return. What remains are tangible assets, i.e. assets that you can touch and that are protected against inflation. The best-known and most popular asset is certainly real estate. But precious metals and precious stones are also becoming more and more common building blocks in the portfolios of private investors. Gemstones in particular combine many advantages and make them an interesting private provision for the future.

The diamond is the smallest store of value. It combines more value in a few millimeters and tenths of a gram than any other investment property. This means that the storage costs – compared to gold, for example – are already reduced to a minimum. The Swiss Kunden Bekommen Werte AG offers diamonds with duty and tax-free storage at Geneva Airport. Here, in the bonded warehouse, the physically acquired diamonds are in one of the world's best high-security depots. The local import/sales taxes only become due when the goods are imported into a country.

How Much is a Diamond Worth?

By Forbes Magazine October 8, 2022 0 Comment

Since 2008, inflation-related asset protection has become increasingly important. A stronger focus on real assets that cannot be increased at will in response to political pressure is unavoidable.

This includes diamonds.

The most popular tangible asset among Germans, real estate, offers a certain protection against inflation, but you have to differentiate between owner-occupied properties and investment properties. It should also be noted that real estate, by its nature, is fungible to a limited extent and the capital commitment period is usually very long. In the long term, however, the so-called "concrete money" will not be affordable for everyone. Here, however, it is important for success to opt for fungible stocks with high potential for increases in value, even with small amounts. Here the diamond is exactly the right form of material value.

Clients of the customers Kunden Bekommen Werte AG benefit from a wide range of advantages. All diamonds traded in the IDC are of tested first quality, have a certified expertise and a certificate.

Buyers thus become the owners of what is probably the most beautiful and most valuable asset in the world, a real value that they can dispose of at any time – and not just a piece of paper that is exposed to speculation, crises, and political influence.

All diamonds are in physical form, which is confirmed by one of the largest auditing companies in the world.

The ownership of the diamonds is always shown as special assets on the balance sheet.

Last but not least, all of AG's customers benefit from storage in the open-air warehouse near Geneva. For comparatively low fees, the highest safety standards are guaranteed here, and, if you wish, Swiss duty, and sales tax exemption apply to the diamonds as long as they are in the warehouse.

Diamonds are now accessible to all investors as the brilliant private pension of the future – thanks to the International Diamonds Contract in Switzerland.

Personal Plans Of The Future Are Diamonds The Private Pension Of The Future?

Zero and even negative interest rates when saving, rising inflation, unfavorable conditions for annuity and insurance products and highly volatile share prices are currently determining the financial markets. If you are looking for security and stability when building up your assets, you are best off with real assets. A form of investment with a long history has proven its worth as a private provision for the future: the diamond. The diamond, the oldest tangible asset in the world.

From their worship as lucky charms as early as 4,000 A.D. in India to the discovery of their workability in the 13th century to the development of the modern brilliant cut around 1910 – the cubic shape and the legendary play of light of diamonds with their refraction and reflection of the spectral colors have always fascinated people.

The highly compressed carbon minerals – the hardest of all-natural substances – are extremely sought after and valuable due to their rarity. A one-carat diamond of the highest quality can be worth more than 20,000 euros and weigh just 0.2 grams.

It is therefore understandable that diamonds have also been considered a reliable asset since their discovery, especially in economically and politically turbulent times like the present

They are a globally recognized means of payment and diamond prices, recorded since the 1960s, have appreciated over all major periods, even during financial crises. “A carat is always a carat” – certified real stones of the highest quality are therefore ideal as a form of investment for both safe and lucrative investments.

But where can private individuals buy diamonds? On the subject

Thanks to the so-called duty-free warehouses set up here, Switzerland is a safe place for trading in all kinds of goods. These free warehouses are well guarded in the immediate vicinity of international airports and are geographically extraterritorial, which means they serve as ideal transit depots for goods in international trade. Customs duties and taxes are only incurred upon import into the destination country. Auction houses, galleries, museums and investment funds, but also private collectors and investors keep their property here, have a safe place to trade and are of course comprehensively insured against all damages. The duty-free warehouse at Geneva Airport is one of the most modern and safest in Switzerland. Immortal values – on realistic terms

While in the past the purchase of the stones was primarily only possible for very wealthy or institutional investors, the IDC also offers normal savers the chance to use the lucrative real asset investment Diamant to secure their wealth accumulation and private provision, especially for old age.

To do this, prospective buyers instruct the customer Bekommen Values Ltd. to buy and keep diamonds of one carat or parts thereof.

Without exceeding the personal budget, the purchase can be made in monthly installments or realized with a one-time payment, depending on the wishes and financial resources of the owner.
